About Hildegard

Born in 1098 in Germany, Hildegard von Bingen composed music, founded a convent, created poetry for her music, and wrote about religion, art, politics, philosophy, science, medicine, and herbs. The high quality of her broad range of activities has assured her a prominent place in Western civilization many centuries later. Named to pay homage to this "Renaissance woman," the Hildegard Publishing Company celebrated its tenth anniversary, and Hildegard's 900th birthday in 1998, with the addition of eight new editions of her music.

Hildegard scholar Marianne Richert Pfau has prepared over seventy of her chants in eight volumes containing new introductions and text translations. Octavos of single antiphons are still available in multiples of ten or more at special prices to celebrate these two events. In 2002 Hildegard's "Ordo Virtutum" was published in a new edition by Hildegard scholar Audrey Ekdahl Davidson. The complete works of this remarkable composer are now available from the Hildegard Publishing Company.

Founded in 1988 by Sylvia Glickman to promote and preserve the music of women composers of the past and present, the company has been described by Ms magazine as "... shaping a music heritage for generations to come ...," and by Piano and Keyboard magazine as "... in the vanguard of the women's music field ... its bold catalog contains unique reprints and first publications" For more information, visit www.hildegard.com.

The Hildegard catalog contains over 500 entries, and is growing each month. In addition to their own publications, they also publish the Casia Publishing Company line and reprints from the twelve-volume G. K. Hall/The Gale Group "Women Composers: Music Through the Ages" series (1996-2003).
